"To the wise no word is necessary. Men of knowledge understand full well that the country was never more prosperous, and that a panic in the midst of such unexampled industrial and commercial activity as this nation has recently enjoyed, and still enjoys, is a grotesque absurdity.

"The reasoning of those persons ... are now participating in runs ... perfectly solvent banking institutions is on a par with that of those citizens who think, because they merely pay rent, they need not have the same concern about the conduct of government as those who own property.

"The informed man knows that those who pay rent are as much taxpayers as those who own the houses in which they live. Their concern with government is equally as great as that of property owners.

"Likewise, the man who draws money from a perfectly solvent bank in such a time as this, instead of protecting himself, may be promoting his own undoing.

"Credit is the life of business. If banks fail, business will totter. If business is wrecked, employment will cease. And what will it profit a man if he gets his small hoard from a bank at the price of his business or of his job?

"Think of this before you join a line of the panic-stricken."

AIR SQUADRON ON FIRST LAP OF ATLANTIC TRIP

12 Italian Planes Take Off in Projected Flight to Rio De Janeiro.

GEN. BALBOA IN COMMAND

Fascist Air Armada in One of Most Notable Exploits Ever Launched.

(Picture on Page 7)

By The Associated Press

ORBETELLO, Italy, Dec. 17—Twelve Italian seaplanes roared away from Lake Orbetello at 7:45 a. m. today (1:45 a. m. Marion time) headed for Cartagena, Spain, on the first lap of a projected trans-Atlantic flight to Rio de Janeiro.

Piloting the first of the planes was General Italo Balbo, Italian air minister and leader of the expedition, which in many ways represents the most ambitious transoceanic flight adventure ever attempted. Fifty-five men comprised the officers and crews of the Fascist air armada.

Prospective Route

From Cartagena, the airmen plan to fly down the Mediterranean and West African coast to a point near Dakar, Senegal, whence the expedition will take off on a 1,000-mile flight across the Atlantic to Natal, Brazil. From Natal they will strike out for Rio de Janeiro. It is planned eventually to sell the planes to the Brazilian government and to return home by ship.

Departure of the expedition followed a brief ceremony. Before leaving the fliers doffed their hats and raised their arms in the Fascist salute.

General Balbo took off first in a black-winged plane emblematic of Fascism, two similar machines following. Then came three other groups of three planes each, the first with white wings, the second with red wings, and the third with green wings, representing the Italian national colors. In the rear were two relief planes, which may be substituted for any of the original 12 planes which may fail enroute.

Weather Favorable

Weather reports after two days' postponement of the start, were favorable.

Prior to departure General Balbo discovered that chicken sandwiches had been included in the lunches fixed for the aviators. He ordered them removed, stating: "Chickens don't fly. They would mean bad luck to us."

Each of the 12 planes carried two sacks of mail for South America.

LODGE CHARITY FUND RUNS LOW, ASKS AID

Eagles Want Help in Bringing Christmas Cheer to Unfortunates Here.

The charity fund of the local Eagles' lodge is facing a shortage which may prevent the organization from continuing its annual practice of distributing well-filled baskets of food among the needy Christmas day, according to John Abel, secretary.

An unusually heavy burden has been placed on the charity fund by family relief work during November and December, and the lodge now lacks sufficient funds to prepare 150 baskets needed this Christmas, Abel says.

To guarantee these families a Merry Christmas despite the shortage, Secretary Abel is asking Marionites who want to help these people to prepare baskets of food, including some little gift for the children such as oranges or candy, or to donate to the lodge's charity fund to help in the preparation of baskets.

QUIZ DEFENDANT

Major Shepard on Stand for Second Day; Denies Murder

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Dec. 17—Maj. Charles A. Shepard today faces continuation of prosecution cross-examination directed at his denial of proposing marriage to Miss Grace Brandon, young stenographer, until nearly four months after the death of his wife whom he is charged with poisoning.

The prosecution, which alleges the 59-year-old army officer poisoned his wife to be free to wed the 24-year-old blonde stenographer, began examination of the witness yesterday after he had testified several hours in his own defense.

Throughout the attack of District Attorney Sardius M. Brewster the army tuberculosis specialist clung to his denial that he had poisoned his wife and to his assertion that he had not mentioned love to Miss Brandon until after Mrs. Shepard's death at Fort Riley, in 1929.

The decision was reached at the justice department today after conferences between Attorney General Mitchell, Assistant Attorney General Youngquist, in charge of prohibition; Philip Forman, United States attorney at Newark; Howard T. Jones, assistant prohibition director, and other officials.

The justice department announced that "at the proper time, the supreme court will be requested to set the case down for early argument."

RAIDERS KEEP GOING

Enforcement Continues in New Jersey Despite Judge's Decision.

By The Associated Press

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 17—Prohibition enforcement continued to function in New Jersey today despite the ruling of Federal Judge William Clark that the method of adoption made the Eighteenth amendment invalid.

The first liquor raid after announcement of the decision was made under direction of George S. Hobart, prosecutor of Bergen county, who sponsored the state's enforcement measure in the legislature. He led a squad of police in a raid on the Riverside Boat and Yacht club early today, in which 30 men and women were arrested.

Judge Clark held that ratification of the Eighteenth amendment by the state legislatures was not the method prescribed by article five for adoption of amendments which transfer powers from the states to the federal government. He held that the amendment to be valid should have been ratified in constitutional conventions in the several states.

"My decision," commented Judge Clark, "will not affect the operation of the prohibition laws in any way. The Hobart act, the New Jersey enforcement law, is also still in force."

Common Pleas Judge William B. Harley at Trenton said that in view of the fact that every possible phase of the question having been threshed out, he could not conceive of Judge Clark's decision being sound.

Philip Forman, the United States attorney who prosecuted the case of William Sprague, clerk of Wantage township, and a farmer, on a charge of transporting beer, in which the indictment was quashed by Judge Clark's decision, was

FATALLY HURT IN TAR BLAST

Cover for Container Strikes Highway Employe, 44, in Head.

LIVES FOR THREE HOURS

Accident Occurs as County Workmen Prepare To Fix Fulton Road.

Special To The Star

CARDINGTON, O., Dec. 17—Injuries sustained when a steel container of heated tar exploded, today had caused the death of Ward Stevens, 44, Morrow county highway employe, of three miles east of here.

Stevens died last night at 6 o'clock in the Jane M. Case hospital at Delaware. He was injured in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. A severe skull fracture caused his death.

With a group of county employes, Stevens had been preparing tar for repair work on the Fulton road near here. The cold weather had caused the material to become too stiff to run freely.

Stevens, according to fellow workers, built a fire around the steel container. Gas escaping through a vent in the barrel caught fire and Stevens is said to have placed his hand over the hole to extinguish the flames. When he released the gas again the explosion occurred.

The top of the container struck Stevens in the head, just above the eyes. Part of his scalp was torn loose and his skull fractured.

Fellow workmen believed he was dead. However, a passing motorist discovered that he was still alive and took him to Cardington for medical attention. The physician here had him removed to the Delaware hospital where he died three hours later.

Four other men working on the highway at the time of the explosion were not injured.

Stevens had been employed in highway work by the county for the last six years. He moved to Cardington from Columbus. He is survived by his widow.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed, but the body will be taken to Columbus for burial.

"The condition of the former president, who last Saturday suffered a vascular spasm, this morning shows an improvement which justifies anticipating favorably the future. (Signed) Dr. Boidin and Professor Guillain."

HOUSTON TO GO ON TRIAL FOR ROBBERY

Case Opens in Common Pleas Court Thursday; Charged with Auto Holdup.

The case of the state of Ohio against Richard Houston, 21, of near Brush Ridge, charged with robbery, is scheduled to open in common pleas court Thursday at 9 a. m.

Houston was indicted in connection with the holdup of three couples in a parked automobile near the Grand Prairie township schoolhouse a month ago. Richard Robinson, 26, his alleged companion, last week pleaded guilty to the same charge and was given 10 years in the Mansfield reformatory with the possibility that the term may be shortened on good behavior.

Robinson is still being held in the Marion county jail as a material witness against Houston.

The two are alleged to have held up, at the point of a sawed-off shotgun, the three couples in question and to have taken a watch and money from them.

Fred W. Warner, of the law firm of Carhart & Warner, will defend Houston, who pleaded not guilty to the charge when he was arraigned a week ago last Saturday following his indictment by the grand jury.

Sheriff John J. Francis yesterday took two prisoners to Columbus to begin serving sentences imposed upon them by common pleas court last week. Robert Wilson, colored, who was given a two-year term, and Kermett Kunkle, who was sentenced to three years, both on burglary charges, were the two.

Stephen Sunsera, sentenced to five years on burglary charges, was taken to the penitentiary Monday, along with Jim Sunday, sentenced to serve a year for forgery.

Report Conditions Good for Building Business

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 17—A survey by Nelson, Hunt company, published today said special conditions favored a revival of normal building construction by early spring. Construction cost now is figured at the lowest level since February, 1923, more than 4 per cent below that of a year ago, and about 20 per cent below the peak reached in 1920. This was attributed to declines in building materials cost.

WITH INDIANS

Alarm for the safety of Ralph H. Farnum, New York theatrical producer, was dispelled today when it was learned that he was living with Piute Indians of Death Valley, California. A large searching party was demobolized today. "He's gone injun," searchers were informed. Farnum, who forsook Broadway early in November for the perils and furnace-like temperature of Death Valley, in search of health, did not know he was being sought, the officer reported.

CHEERS GREET SPANISH KING

Alfonso Leaves Palace for First Time Since Start of Revolt.

MONARCHY IS VICTORIOUS

But Nationwide Unrest and Agitation for Republic Still Threatens.

By The Associated Press

MADRID, Dec. 17—For the first time since revolution put Spain under martial law, King Alfonso came out of his palace today and drove in an open carriage to the Church of San Francisco for ceremonies commemorating the achievements of the South American patriot, Simon Bolivar.

At his own order he was accompanied by only a skeleton guard, and he smiled broadly and waved his arm at the great crowds which cheered his passage through the streets. It was characteristic of his flair for ignoring danger to his person.

But General Damaso Berenguer, the premier, worn by the days and nights of care, had collapsed under strain. The doctors said he had a severe case of tonsilitis and that his illness was aggravated by sleeplessness and incessant smoking since last Friday, but that he would recover.

While this was going on Niceto Alcala Zamora, whom the revolutionists proclaimed "president of the republic," made a statement in prison accepting responsibility for his part in the revolt and expressing a willingness to take the con-

COURT RULES LIQUOR RAID ON RESIDENCE OK

Intoxicants Illegally Obtained Removes Right To Claim Private Dwelling.

MARTIN MAKES DECISION

Judge Rules as Attorney Attempts To Force State Men To Return Whisky.

A ruling by Municipal Judge William B. Martin that the possession of liquor illegally obtained or manufactured takes from a private home its rights as a "bona fide" residence featured a hearing yesterday afternoon for Frank Nicolost, 37, of 501 West Center street, on trial for illegal possession of liquor.

This ruling is contrary to a general interpretation of recent court rulings that signs of liquor trafficking must be evident before authorities have a right to search a bona fide residence for liquor, with or without a warrant to do so, officials say.

To Appeal Case

Judge Martin defined "liquor illegally obtained or manufactured" as all other liquors except that prescribed by a physician for medicinal use and that which was in possession of the owner before the Eighteenth amendment was adopted.

The decision probably will be tested by higher courts as counsel for the defendant posted an appeal bond of $700 to obtain his release pending error proceedings in the common pleas court.

The ruling was made at the opening of a hearing for Nicolost, charged with illegal possession of liquor by state prohibition officers. It was given when Theodore Ochs, representing Nicolost, made a motion asking that the confiscated liquors be returned to the Nicolost residence. He based his motion on the theory that officers, with or

KALKBRENNER FOUND GUILTY ON CHARGE

Eaglewood Club Proprietor Convicted of Illegal Possession in Municipal Court.

Herman Kalkbrenner, proprietor of the Eaglewood club, south of here on Prospect pike, was found guilty of a charge of manufacturing liquor at a hearing in municipal court this afternoon.

The hearing came to a close shortly after noon, after the defense had presented its case. Testimony of three state prohibition officers was taken this morning.

Sentence was not pronounced by Judge William B. Martin. This will be done later. Kalbrenner was given hearing on only one of the two charges brought against him. After he was found guilty of the manufacturing charge an action charging possession of liquor was continued.

Action was brought against Kalbrenner by State Prohibition Agents McDougal, Jones and Wine after his residence adjoining the Eaglewood club had been raided a week ago last Saturday. The agents declared they found beer in the process of making when they made the visit.

Judge William B. Martin overruled a motion made by Fred Warner, counsel for Kalkbrenner, to return the confiscated property, including bottles and other property which the agents claim contained a small amount of liquor.

Following Kalkbrenner's hearing, H. L. Lewis, proprietor of a filling station north of Marion on Bucyrus pike, was scheduled to be given hearing on a charge of illegal possession of liquor. He was arrested by the state officers shortly after Kalkbrenner was placed under arrest last week. Frank Wiedemann will represent Lewis. All three cases are being prosecuted by John Wiedemann, city prosecutor.

Senator Rohe Assured Prominent Place in Assembly by Assignments.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 17—Regular Republicans will go into the new Ohio senate with the olive twig extended to the five insurgents who bolted the recent caucus.

The first peace overture was seen yesterday when the committee on committees gave each of the revolters a committee chairmanship and representation of most of the 21 standing committees. All of the insurgents abstained themselves from the meeting.

Republicans must have the support of at least two of the insurgents in order to control the senate.

The insurgents and the committees they will head are:

C. J. Anderson of Shelby, utilities; V. D. Emmons of Akron, conservation; Frank E. Whittemore of Akron, public works and state buildings; Walter G. Nickels of New Philadelphia, highways and automotive, and Nils P. Johnson of Youngstown, commerce and industry.

The Democrats were given one less than a majority on most of the committees, but received no chairmanships.

Note to Santa

(Will Rogers Special)

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Dec. 17—There must be an awful lot of factories and firms and individuals that have always shown some kind of appreciation to their folks on Christmas, who perhaps this year on account of conditions are not able to do all they would like to, and are at a loss just what to do.

Wouldn't this be more welcome than a gift? Send each one a note and tell 'em that they are not going to be fired, that their position is secure.

I believe that will be a mighty acceptable Christmas present to everybody that is on salary.

It will beat any present you can send, relieve their anxiety and let them go out and do some shopping on their own and thereby help everybody.

CHARGE AGAINST LINDSEY DROPPED

Case Thrown Out of Court After Judge Rebukes Denver Jurist.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 17—A charge of disorderly conduct against former Judge Ben Lindsey was dismissed today by Magistrate Dreyer.

The court dismissed the complaint made out by a police officer charging the Denver jurist with interfering with a religious ceremony when he interrupted Bishop William T. Manning's assault on companionate marriage in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine a week ago last Sunday.

Then Magistrate Dreyer ordered a new complaint drawn to be signed by a representative of the church and when nobody came forward to sign it, he threw the case out of court.

He rebuked Lindsey, however, in dropping the charge.

On the protest of Lindsey's attorney, Arthur Garfield Hays, that his client was being placed in double jeopardy by the wording of the complaint, the trial was postponed last Wednesday and the charge reduced to simple disorderly conduct, instead of disturbing a church service.

CITY ANSWERS PAVING SUIT

Patton Acts in Injunction Brought on Prospect Street Improvement.

Although the [illegible] of the improvement of North Prospect street from Mark street to the Erie railroad was $13,970.66, property holders under the act of the improvement have been assessed only $8,000.00 of that sum, according to an answer filed by the city in common pleas court yesterday in the injunction petition brought by Lewis Parish and others [illegible] from collecting the assessments.

The answer filed by City Solicitor Carlos M. Patton denies every [illegible] made by Parish that the city is assessing property for any [illegible] for improvements not authorized by city council.

Denies Allegation

None of the work of the construction of curbs is [illegible] beyond the terms of the ordinance and has been accepted properly, [illegible] the answer states.

Widening of Prospect street in front of the Isaac Delay Co. and the St. Mary's parochial school was assessed only to those parties and not to other property holders, the widening of other parts being charged against the city, pursuant to the act the city avers.

The answer admits that the widening of alley intersection was charged against the whole cost but this action is claimed to be in accordance with plans and specifications made by the city engineer and approved by council. The ruling and repairing of sidewalks at item amounting to $450 also was assessed against all the property holders, it is admitted.

Parish Brings Suit

The assessment of $2.97 a lineal foot frontage is entirely legal and is based only on improvements authorized by council according to the answer.

Parish brought the suit a month ago to enjoin the city and County Auditor Earl E. Thomas from making the assessment and collecting the money.

County Treasurer Earl J. Shelton is also made a defendant.

At the time Parish was restrained other property holders were given a temporary injunction, which will be effective until the court hands down a ruling on the issue. The date for the hearing has not yet been set.

Harding High Juniors Present Class Plays

Miss Lucille Foreman Coaches Three Productions with Students in Casts; "The Knave of Hearts," "Printer's Ink" and "The Nine Who Were Mothers" Given.

Junior high [illegible] under the direction of Miss Lucille Foreman, presented an interesting program of three one act plays last night in the Central Junior High school auditorium.

A graceful fantasy, "The Knave of Hearts" by Louise Saunders, capably [illegible] by Miss Mary Williams, opened the program. The play was built around the old nursery rhyme. The queen of hearts she baked some tarts, and was staged with the use of drapes in bright blue, against which the red and white of which most of the costumes were made showed effectively. It all revolves around the efforts of Charles Pulsford, "Pompeleble VIII, King of Hearts" to find a queen who is adept at pastry baking. A ruse on the part of the "Knave of Hearts," John Langley, brings the play to a happy ending, with the "Lady Violetta" Mary Linscott, on the throne.

The cast included Jesse Robinson, Henrietta Billattault, Betty Mantz, Lilian Thomas, Grace Wise, Charles Pulsford, Willard Mantz, John Langley, Marjorie Venzie, Mary Linscott, Grace Marie Staker, Mary Catharine Geyer, Virginia Grover, Ruth Owens, Fannie Harris, Geneva Brady, Neva Risk and Thelma Knight.

The second play was a drama, "Printer's Ink" written by Orene Simmons and set in the editorial office of a newspaper. The code of the newspaperman, that the public is due the straight facts of any story, irregardless of whom it may affect was the theme. Paul Webb portrayed the managing editor, who, because of his principles, orders set in type for publication, the story of his own daughter's slaying at the hands of gangmen whose leader she was. Others in the cast were Ben Jacoby, Wendell Knickel, Lawrence McClure, Jay Howser, Esther Topliff and Willard Mantz.

On short notice Jay Howser went into the part of a cub reporter, a rather difficult part, because of the illness of Herman Rhu Jr., who had rehearsed in the part. Willard Mantz stepped into Howser's original part of a messenger boy.

"The Nine Who Were Mother"

A Christmas play, centering about a mother, who as always, is the center of every home's activities, closed the program. One of her sons, Paul Hunt, several days before Christmas, orders her to bed and [illegible] comes down and straightens [illegible] things telling her son that his plan had been plain to her all along but that the experience for the others has had its effect.

Doris Klingel was the mother, the nine were Eugene Mantz, Jack Hudson, Wilma Warr, Paul Hunt, Katheryn Schneider, Leland Lindsey, Helen Bailey, Doris Van Meter and Lemell Jackson.

A short concert preceded the opening of the program, was given by the high school orchestra under the direction of T. R. Evans and later selections were played during the intermissions.

AUDIENCE HELD SPELLBOUND AT PASSION PLAY OPENING.

The play is a powerful, inspiring thing, which held the audience spellbound for the two and a half hours of its performance. It cannot be regarded in the light of an ordinary dramatic effort. It is first of all a religious pageant, planned to recapture and present in a human way the zeal and vision of a great day past. Yet in its attention to detail, its fine sense of the universal human emotions and its power to convince, the play was almost Shakespearean. It is a faithful portrayal of the last seven days of Christ on earth, embellished with beautiful music and lovely settings.—The Ohio State Journal, Columbus, Ohio.

FREIBURG PASSION PLAY DONE WITH SUBLIME, REVEREND ART.

The immortal story and promise of humanity—the Passion of Jesus Christ, was told poignantly, reverently and with powerful effect. The Freiburg Passion Play was done with an art which approached the sublime. It is a lovely thing, and will move, as it obviously did last night, any sensitive soul.—Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer.

FASSNACHTS ARE EFFECTIVE IN PASSION PLAY SPECTACLE. CLEVELAND (OHIO) NEWS.

ENDORSEMENTS OF THE CLERGY

"The Freiburg Passion Players have so long a history and tradition behind them so significant a motif and are in their essence so genuinely dramatic and reverent as to make their presentation worthwhile for any creed. It is a religious spectacle—not an entertainment."—Bishop Herman Page, Episcopal Bishop, Detroit, Mich.

"No higher service can be rendered humanity, and the present age than to stimulate a spirit of reverence for those things and events which Christian tradition holds sacred. Just such a noble work the Freiburg Players are doing."—Dr. Arch C. Cree, Executive Secretary, Georgia Baptists Missions, Atlanta.

"It is a privilege to commend the Passion Play by the Freiburg Players. This pageant is sublime in its beauty and perfection, in its rendition and in the inspiration of its message.—Rev. S. T. Senter, Pastor, First Methodist Episcopal Church, Atlanta.

"I am confident their pious, devout, and religious rendition of the sacred passion and death of our divine Saviour will deeply impress those who witness its portrayal."—Michael J. Gallagher, Bishop of Detroit.

CHRISTMAS

BRIGHTER, ever brighter, gleams the star of Bethlehem. Centuries pass. Nations pass. Cultures pass. But the great Truth survives, and grows in glory.

On Christmas, who is there that stands not in awe of a spirit that has been victorious through ages of Hatred and Persecution, War and Suffering; a Spirit that has rested firm in a Commercial Age.

We heartily congratulate Whatsoever Circle, of the King's Daughters for bringing the Passion Play to Marion at Christmas tide.

STOCKS RALLY 10 6 POINTS

Occurs After Sales Of Oils, Rails to Low Levels.

By Associated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 17—The stock market showed the most clear-cut rallying climax in weeks today, moved vigorously upward. Rails, oils and miscellaneous plunged the list further to new low ground during the morning but soon after midday a rebound occurred. Many recovered losses of several points, and several showed net gains of similar amounts. Trading was in large volume in the morning, but slackened today.

American Can dropped four points, then rebounded seven, tumbled three, and finally six. American Telephone fell four points to the lowest in three years, then recovered. United States Steel declined more than a point but rallied to show a gain. Other shares making losses of two points or more included North American, Eastman Kodak, International Harvester, American Water Works and Electric, Coca Cola and Woolworth. Many then recovered in part. Trading resisted the morning pressure and picked up more than eight million shares.

Most business statistics were considered mildly favorable. Steel operations indicated ingot production would hold steady in the first quarter.

The American Metal Market said that many producers who had not been optimistic regarding improvement in January now expect the whole price structure "to improve all down the line." Automobile statistics showed a production of 62,000 gallons in gasoline stocks, although refineries increased their operations three per cent. This could not be construed very favorably in view of the comment of The Lamp, official organ of Standard of New Jersey, which said that the refiners must cut their production from seven to eight per cent, if the troubles of 1930 are to be obviated next year.

NEW OFFERINGS BRINGS SLUMP

Wheat Prices Fall to Lowest Level Since 1901.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Dec. 17—Wheat fell today to the lowest prices which July delivery has reached here since 1901. The drop followed sharp setbacks in wheat quotations at Liverpool, a condition ascribed to pressure of newly harvested offerings from the southern hemisphere, together with deficiency of buying power. Chicago wheat deliveries other than July were sustained by purchas orders from government sponsored sources.

Opening irregular, 1¼ to ¾ cents off, July 66@68½ cents, wheat afterward underwent a further tumble for July. Corn started ¼@⅝ cents down rallied a little, and then broke lower.

Momentary flurried general selling but almost complete absence of other indications of anything unusual accompanied the breaks in Chicago wheat July prices to levels heretofore unprecedented for 29 years. Closest comparisons were with July 1901, when wheat plunged as low as 63½ cents. Contributing to downward momentum was the fact that the Winnipeg market outdid all known records and registered more than 10c a bushel under current prices here.

Brief rallies in wheat here met with renewed temporary expansion of selling and the market for July soon showed a break of about 2c below yesterday. The drops were in the face of reports that the Australian wheat crop had been damaged 10,000,000 bushels. Corn and oats dropped with wheat and as a result of stop loss selling. Provisions were responsive to grain weakness, despite upturns in hogs.

Eggs displayed a tendency to go into higher price levels, when the wholesale price was boosted a cent today. Indications are that this increase will not affect the retail market today but a gain is expected Thursday or Friday.

Bananas may go up a cent before Saturday, following low prices of 8 and 9 cents a pound in order to clear an oversupplied market.

Annual School Report Drawn By County Auditor

Thomas Shows Financial Status of City, Village and Township Schools June 30; Report To Go to J. L. Clifton, State Director of Education.

Schools in Marion city and county received $1,771,675.82 and spent $1,494,025.21 during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, according to figures contained in the annual school financial report just filed with J. L. Clifton state director of education by County Auditor Earl E. Thomas.

The balance of $207,653.31 in the various school districts was carried over into the fiscal year beginning July 1 and ending next June 30 and made a total balance in all funds of $542,650.463.

City Has Balance

City schools received $1,287,398.88 from taxation, exclusive of interest, tuition and state aid, and the expenditures amounted to $1,062,850.80, leaving a balance of $225,078.08 for the year and a total balance of $583,966.38.

Receipts in county schools totaled $468,422.49 including the balance carried over from the previous year and expenditures were $431,784.42, leaving a balance of $36,717.08.

Bond retirement and interest took the major portion of the city schools' expenses $384,581, having gone for the former item and construction having cost $299,919.99. The current expenses which includes instruction amounted to $389,934.97. New construction and reconstruction of old buildings were other expense items.

Current expenses in the county schools amounted to $542,320.86 of the total expenses and $172,583.51 of this figure went for instruction purposes. Bonds in the sum of $55,360.58 were retired.

Tax Valuations

The city schools have bonds outstanding in the sum of $974,500, a total of $300,000 having been issued this year for the construction of new buildings. In the county the bonded indebtedness totals $381,627.86 as of June 30.

Tax valuations of the city and county school districts total $91,517,260, of which $51,500,400 is in the city and $40,007,860 is in the county.

School districts which comprise the county system are Caledonia village, Claridon township, Grand Prairie township, Green Camp village, LaRue village, Marion township, Montgomery township, Morral village, Agosta village, Pleasant township, Prospect village, Richland township, Scott township, Tully township and Waldo village.

OVERSUPPLY FORCES BUTTER PRICE DOWN

Commodity Quoted at 33 to 34 Cents a Pound on Local Markets.

An oversupply of butter forced retail quotations to new record lows here today when quotations of 33 and 34 cents a pound were made in a number of Marion stores.

When grocers chalk up special prices for Saturday trade, butter prices are expected to drop as low as 32 cents a pound. A number of grocers, however, are holding butter quotations up to the 36 and 40 cent mark.

Chicago market, which governs local prices, now reports a large amount of butter held in storage. Rather than throw the local butter surplus into storage at a very low figure, local producers would rather dispose of the surplus here by cutting prices, they explained today.

Butter prices are the lowest they have been since 1914, and are the lowest December quotations in possibly 20 years, according to producers.

HEALTH BOARDS HOLD MEETING AT HARDING

Members Express Satisfaction with Operation of Joint Staff After Year.

Satisfaction over the new combined city and county health districts and the operation of a joint staff of city and county health workers since the two districts were united last March 15 was expressed by members of both boards in a joint annual meeting in Hotel Harding last night.

The new setup is believed by members of both boards to be more efficient and economical than the former two sets of officials.

Mary Ellen Kerr, secretary of the city board of health, was rehired as secretary for both boards at a salary of $[illegible] a month and vital statistic record fees. Her duties as secretary to both boards begins Jan. 1. She will continue the work she has done as city clerk and will also take over the duties of clerk of the county board.

She charged he paid her bills in Paris, gave her $1,000 to come to the United States and marry him, met her at a New York hotel and disclosed the fact that he was already married.

Combining the offices of the secretaries will save approximately $40 a month for each board, officials say.

Dr. N. Sifritt, health commissioner, and Dr. J. T. Gruber, inspector of food and milk, were rehired for another year beginning Jan. 1. C. M. Tobin was not rehired as sanitary policeman at the meeting last night but probably will be reemployed at a last minute meeting this month when all town bills will be up for consideration.

FOR FATHER

Love's Reawakening

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy.

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Dicky Pledge Anew Their Love.

I HELD out my hand with my eyes closed, as Dicky directed, for my Christmas present, and in another second felt a ring slipped gently over the third finger of my right hand. Then his hand was beneath my chin, my face was turned to his and his lips pressed and clung to mine in the kiss with which he has given me every Christmas present since we have been married.

"Now you may open your eyes," he said, and as I obeyed him, he held my hand so that my eyes rested on a ring which I had admired months before at an exhibition of antique jewelry which Dicky and I had attended, but which I never had dreamed of owning. It was an emerald in a carved setting, and I gave a little gasp of delight and astonishment as I saw it.

"Oh," I breathed. "You bought it this time—"

"Naturally, since I didn't steal it, and we're not philanthropists—that's exhibitors," he retorted.

"I never dreamed when I admired it—" I began confusedly.

"I did," he said vehemently. "It's just the kind of thing I wanted for you, and," he added ridiculously, "at least it's something Grandpaw can't duplicate, you know."

With reference to Philip Veritzen I, however, I caught back the words before, "Did you duplicate it?" but Dicky looked at me as if I really had uttered the

"I suppose you're wondering about the gorgeous gift' Ede was raving over," he said. "Well, you know nothing resembling this, and I thought to know it, without telling you."

"No, Dicky." I interposed. "You can't tell me anything—"

"Then he said shortly. "Got it out of my system once and for all. I don't know what's wrong with Ede lately, she's getting positively grandeur, I think. She's been nagging for weeks about my leaving the job and leaving her the brunt of the work, but there's a bit of foundation for the

"I'm sure of that," I interposed with quick loyalty, and Dicky's arms tightened about me.

Dicky's Gift to Edith

"At the same time she's been dropping broad hints about her watch being such an old thing, that it didn't keep good time any more, so I thought I'd use the same stone for a double killing. I called up Darcy's told 'em what I wanted and the price I wanted to pay, left the selection and the delivery to them, and sent over my check and my calling card, the letter inscribed with holiday best wishes. They evidently got it to her on time, and she evidently liked it. But I wouldn't have you think——"

"I don't think anything," I returned firmly, "except that you did the only thing possible in a most satisfactory manner. Let's not talk about it any longer."

But my heart was singing. He had not even selected Edith's gift, but left that task to a jewelry salesman. In its way, the gift was as perfunctory as that of the factory manufacturer who encloses five dollar bills in envelopes for Christmas presents to his employees.

"You darling," Dicky said, kissing down my eyelids. "You make me feel terribly ashamed of myself. Honest, I'm sorry for smashing that dinkums Grandpaw brought the roses in. I know I didn't fool you. I fell on purpose and threw the thing into the fire. D'ye suppose you can get it fixed?"

His lips were still against my eyes, so it was impossible to see his face but I knew my cue.

"It doesn't matter to me whether it's fixed or not" I said indifferently—and truly. Then I added a little warning, for I did not want Dicky surprised again by any erratic action of Philip Veritzen's.

"I may be mistaken, Dicky," I said slowly, "but I'm afraid Mr. Veritzen is bringing something else to me today. When he brought in the roses and the container, he said: 'This is not your Christmas present, it is just a Christmas wish,' and I fancied he emphasized the word 'wish.' I do hope I imagined it, for I don't want——"

"Don't take your oath too soon. Grandpaw may be bringing you the Roseban crown jools. But—to the hot place with him! Snuggle down and 'give me some lovins,' as Junior says."

I was too happy at the command to speculate as I might otherwise have done upon Dicky's surprising complacency at the mention of Philip Veritzen's possible gift, and to surmise that my calm acceptance of Edith's offering to him had set a pace for him which he had no choice but to follow. With my head on my husband's shoulder, his arms around me, his lips against my hair, I watched with him while the flames burned low in the grate, and the soft lights from the Christmas tree were the only illumination of the room.

Fearful of Her Happiness

The air grew chilly, and Dicky loosened his clasp of me.

"You'll get chilled if we stay down here longer," he said as he rose, pulling me with him. "Let's get busy with the final gestures."

He put the screen in front of the fire and turned out the Christmas tree lights, while I switched on a bulb near the entrance door which I meant to keep on as a night light. Then I took the papers from Harry's table and Lillian's, and with a little laugh at the ceremony solemnly promised to the children that we might not see our presents prematurely, I took the paper from Dicky's table, and he from mine, and turning our backs, went out of the lovely room.

Was I morbid—or prescient that after one of the most precious half hours of my life with my husband, a cold little foreboding should thrust its viper's head into my happy thoughts.

Would I be as happy when I left this room twenty-four hours from now?

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

WEDNESDAY. I didn't feel like anything was going to happen to make me glad when I woke up this morning and wrastled with Jubilee before I pushed him out of bed. It always makes him glad to treat him rough. He thinks the more I wrastle him and turn him upside down the more I love him. He is right. It takes a dog to understand a feller. If I would show my love for my father or mother that way the first thing my father would do would be to take me out to the barn and wrap a holdback strap around me. It has been a long time since he has done that, but we have still got the holdback strap. I would take it out and lose it, but if he took me out there sometime and didn't find it he might use something else; because when he is made he had just as soon hit a feller with a cow as with a holdback strap.

When we were in the barn and I was doing the milking and the rest of the bunch was doing the talking and wondering what they were going to get for Christmas, nobody thought anything was going to happen, and I was wondering what I was going to give for Christmas instead of what I was going to get. Then I went in and fed my face, and we went down to the pond and would of had a fight with a feller we caught using our slide, only he could run too fast, and then we went to school, and I had my lessons and the letting out bell rang and we were all going when the teacher grinned and said, "Oh, yes; I almost forgot; Friday will be the last day of school till after New Years." I thought we'd all go up in the air and bust like rubber balloons. Then she asted if we'd all just as soon take tomorrow afternoon for a holiday and go out and get a Christmas Tree for Friday. We all said we would, and she thanked us. The idee of thanking us for taking a holiday. We then out for the woods right after school and got a peachy tree and drug it home to my house on our sleys, and tomorrow we are going to take a half holiday and [illegible] set up. But first I have got to go and spend my four dollars. I wish I knowed what to get her. If it was for me I would get me some long pants, but a fella don't know what to get a girl. But I hope I can find something useless. Nobody ought to give useful things for Christmas. I might give her my ant, but I think I will save her for Valentine day. I asted my grandfather what was good to give a girl and he said castor oil. He thinks he is funny, but sometimes he ain't. It got colder tonight and Jubilee was glad to be pulled up.

Passion Play Scenes Show Last Days of Christ's Life

Freiburg Group To Appear at Ohio Theater Last Three Days of Week.

A carload of scenery is used in the production of the Freiburg Passion Play to be brought here Thursday, Friday and Saturday under the auspices of What So Ever circle of King's Daughters.

Costumes are exact copies of the period portrayed and some have been years in the making. The robes worn by Caiaphas and Pilate are of heavy silk and richly decorated. The glittering armor worn by the soldiers has been copied from exhibits in the Louvre, Paris, Paris.

The scene of the Last Supper, one of the most dramatic in the production, follows closely Da Vinci's famous painting in the arrangement of the players, the lighting and the costumes. Other scenes taken from the painting of the old masters are the Saviour in Gethsemane, Christ After the Scourging, the Saviour on the Way to Calvary and the Descent from the Cross.

Four members of the Fassnacht family, whose ancestors have assumed leading roles in the Freiburg Passion Play since 1760, will appear here.

The basis of the drama is the last seven days of the life of Christ on earth, presented in many parts supplemented by tableaux and bringing out the principal events of the Bible in that period.

What So Ever circle will use its proceeds to maintain its child's charity bed at City hospital.

The nuove picture is of Augusta Fassnacht who portrays Mary, the mother of Jesus in the Passion Play to be presented here for the next three days.

CHRISTMAS

Peoples of many lands and times have contributed to the Christmas customs.

The Druids hung mistletoe over the entrance of their dwellings as a propitiation to their sylvan deities.

The English tradition of cutting the Yule log and dragging it ceremoniously to the baronial hall, where it blazed a welcome to high and low, originated in Scandinavia. The great Yule candle was a forerunner of our own Christmas lighting.

The custom of employing holly and other plants for decorative purposes at Christmas is also one of antiquity and is regarded as a survival of the Roman Saturnalia, during which the Romans lighted and decorated evergreen trees. Drusus, the Roman, introduced the custom into Germany, where it was first adapted to the Christmas festival.

Light has always signified joy, celebration.

CHAPTER 32

A Secret Reunion

FANNY took a night train for Evansville, about 40 miles from Cloughbarre, and connected by an interurban trolley. She could not afford a sleeper and did not care—she could not have slept anyway. In the morning she found she just had time for a bath and change before the early trolley.

As she pinned her disguise, the black widow's veil about her hat, she laughed aloud. What a conspirator she would make — how Sheila would enjoy hearing about it. Clutching a little jeweler's box in her hand she sallied forth, almost light-heartedly.

As she lingered by the Johnsons' lilac hedge, pretending to smell the blossoms, she saw a block away a small figure come alone out of the Frosts' front gate. Fanny barely had time to snatch off her widow's veil and thrust it under a lilac bush, pull on her cream colored mousquetaire gloves she had carried in tissue paper to keep from soiling.

Fanny's heart was beating so wildly she could hardly speak.

"Sheila," she got out when the child was within a few feet of her—but gently so as not to frighten her—"Sheila; it's Mother. Don't you remember me?"

Sheila stopped and regarded her gravely — a sturdy, brown-faced little girl, with bluish gray eyes set wide apart, in a plain tan linen frock. The darling, the darling!

Sheila evidently was wrestling with an agony of embarrassment.

"Yes . . . I think I do," she said shyly at last.

"Sheila, darling, Mother's come all the way from New York to see you. I want so much to talk to you. Will you walk a little way with me?"

"I'll be late to school."

"Just a little late. Will it matter much—just this once?"

"I'm having a party; it's my birthday," said Sheila.

"Of course it is. Do you think Mother's ever forgotten? See, I've brought you a present." Fanny's hands trembled so she dropped the little box. Sheila picked it up but made no move to open it. They had been walking slowly toward the school. Fanny held her breath as they neared the corner. A short block distant was the small strip of parkway which stood between the river and Cloughbarre's best residence district. Without word or glance, but without hesitating Sheila turned at right angles toward the river and led the way to a bench half hidden by an enormous flowering forsythia bush.

"Why did you go away?" she asked in a small voice.

Fanny hastily gulped down the lump in her throat.

"Darling, Mother was sent away. Or rather, such things were said to her—cruel, wicked things—that she could not stay longer in your grandmother's house. Mother had done something she shouldn't—something that looked bad, but wasn't. Mother hasn't time to explain now; but when you are older and can understand better I promise to tell you all about it. You must not believe that she ever did anything dreadful."

"Wouldn't Daddy believe you?"

"Your grandmother wouldn't and I never saw your father alone. It was always hard for Mother to talk before Grandmother. She's a good woman but so...so different that she never understood very well."

"Daddy's alone in his office; we could go and see him now and tell him."

"Darling, blessed child! You do believe Mother?"

"Why, yes," said Sheila, wondering. It had never occurred to her to disbelieve.

"And you won't forget to come to see me—as soon as you can—when you're older?"

Sheila promised not to forget.

Somewhere across the river a clock began striking. One . . . two . . . five . . . seven . . . nine. Her train left Evansville a little after 11. And Sheila mustn't be too late for school.

"Darling, you haven't looked at your present. You may not like it. Can you guess what I have on a shelf in my closet?"

"Another present?"

"All the presents I've bought for you on your birthdays and Christmasses ever since I went away. First I bought dolls—then I remembered you were growing too big for dolls so I bought books—such heavenly fairy stories—and a little red tam-o'-shanter, a string of rose quartz—oh, lots and lots of things. When you come we can look at them and then give them away."

Sheila glanced quickly up at her mother.

"I wouldn't like to give them away," she said and was seized with an agony of shyness. To cover it she began hastily unwrapping her present. On a pad of white velvet in a white kid box lay a small fat gold heart enameled with pearls and turquoises. "It's beautiful. Oh, Mother, it's beautiful."

"You really like it?"

"I love it. It's the beautifulest present I ever had."

"Darling, Mother has to go in a minute. Tell me what you do all day, what you like to do."

"I love my pony most. I think. And I like Marjorie—that's my best friend. And dancing school. Oh, I like lots of things."

"Do you still go to the Bayshore for the summers?"

"Yes, Mother. When I am 16 Daddy is going to take me to Europe for a long visit with Aunt Amelia."

"Your Aunt Amelia and I used to be great friends. I've often thought that if she had been home—" Fanny stopped abruptly, then asked if Leona was still with them.

"Oh, yes. Sometimes I think I like Leona next best to Daddy and —you." This last scarcely audible.

"Thank you, sweetheart. You've made me very happy." Fanny managed to say. She longed to snatch Sheila fiercely to her heart, to cover her face with kisses. But she dared venture no more than to take a small brown hand in hers, and pat it. Sheila edged a little closer, closer still until she was snuggled against her mother. When Fanny's arm went round her she gave a little sigh of content. They smiled at each other, shyly yet intimately. Temporarily at least the five years' separation was sponged out: Fanny had her child back.

"Sheila . . . what do they tell you about me?"

"Nothing. Just that you went away and that you mustn't be talked about because it makes Daddy unhappy."

"Dearest, it does dreadful things to little girls to be ashamed of their mothers. If other girls hint things, if they stop talking when mothers are mentioned, just remember what I've told you—that there's no real reason to be ashamed, that when you are a little older it will all be explained."

The clock across the river struck the quarter hour and Fanny knew that she must go. Sheila made no protest but she clung to her mother, begged her to promise to come again her next birthday.

"Sweetheart, if I can I'll surely be here. I'll come every year. We'll have that to look forward to."

"Couldn't you write to me?"

"They wouldn't give you my letters, and I can't teach you to go on deceiving your father by writing to me. I hope it isn't wrong to ask you not to tell him, or anyone, that you have seen me. But if they find out and ask you, you must be quite frank. Your father won't blame you—will know it's all my fault. Inside your locket on a piece of paper is my address. Will you hide it somewhere and if you are ever really ill have Leona telegraph me?"

They ventured on a hurried kiss. Then Sheila was gone for good, running la[illegible] turning every little while to wave.

"I lik[illegible] next best to Daddy and you," she had said.

Fanny's heart both ached and sang. Sheila was here again — at least a little here. In spite of the pain that was rapture.

To Be Continued.

FIRES INCREASE

Cold Snap Boosts Blazes as Auto Roofs Ignite.

A series of four minor fires accompanied low temperatures which again gripped the city last night and this morning.

Fire originating in a flooded carburetor of a Ford coupe owned by Oscar Farris of 750 Creston avenue did $10 damage to the car before firemen answered the call in the chief's car. The run was made last night at 6:30. The fire occurred on Lee street.

Another automobile fire was reported last night at 8 when a flooded carburetor in an automobile owned by Carl Leffler of 224 South Greenwood street caught fire. The flames were extinguished with a bucket of water before firemen arrived.

Sparks from a chimney falling on shingle roofs were responsible for the other two fires. One was at David A. West residence at 602 Jefferson street last night at 6:40, when $5 damage was done, and the other at the M. C. Kramer residence at 258 Blaine avenue this morning at 7. In the latter fire, $10 damage was done. The run to the D. A. West home was made by company No. 3. Companies No. 1 and 2 answered a call to the Kramer residence.

Hold Man Here as Deserter from Army

Arthur Burns, 22, giving his address as Chicago avenue, said to be a deserter from the United States army at Oswego, N. Y., Dec. 9, was taken to Fort Hayes in Columbus today by police.

He was placed under arrest by police when he revealed his former connections with the army. He was arrested shortly after he appeared at police station seeking night's lodging.

Perhaps the presence of his superior officer and an over-zealousness to make a good showing caused the patrolman to miss the burglar with three consecutive shots.

Dr. Sonnanstine was attracted to the front porch of his residence on Vine street just south of Church, in time to see the chase after hearing the sound of a racing motor. The motor he heard is believed to have been that of an accomplice to the burglar, who was waiting to assist him in a getaway.

Scarcely had the safety director stepped out on the porch when the burglar, with the patrolman in close pursuit, dashed past.

Hr. Dr. Sonnanstine arrived on the scene earlier and stepped from the porch to investigate the sounds he heard, he might have been a target for the revolver fire of either the burglar or the patrolman, as the darkness of 5 a. m made it impossible to distinguish features readily.

Decorations Draw Comment

MARIONITES are not the only ones who appreciate the elaborate Christmas decorations in the business section of the city. The brightly colored lights and streamers of laurel have attracted favorable comment from passing tourists, it was revealed here recently.

When a Marion automobile dealer attended a district sales conference in Cleveland, he heard "Marion" mentioned in the course of the conversation.

Investigating, he found that J. J. Clark, a Columbus man, and district branch manager at Columbus, had passed through Marion on a return trip from Ft. Wayne. Mr Clark declared he was so impressed by the decorations that he paused a few moments in Marion to drive around the business district and admire the trimmings.

"They're the finest ones I saw between Columbus and Ft. Wayne," he declared.

The decorations were purchased by Marion retail merchants. Current to light the decorations is furnished gratis by the C. D. & M. Electric Co.

Police Certainly Know Their History

CITY police have quite suddenly become students of grand opera and ancient history. The reasons are two colorful calendars hanging from the walls of the police station.

Carmen, the naughty cigaret girl of opera fame, is portrayed in flashing colors and an interesting pose on one of the calendars. Her inanimate presence in the station has caused more than one visitor to halt a few moments and study the picture more closely.

When one is through admiring Carmen, obliging policeman will suggest a look at Helen of Troy on another wall of the station.

It is generally conceded by police that the 1931 calendars are just a little bit more attractive than any produced in previous years.

TRAFFIC TOLL GOES HIGHER

Nation's Auto Deaths for 1930 Placed at 32,000, Increase of Four Per Cent.

By The Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 17.—Motor vehicle accident deaths in the United States this year will be approximately 32,000 of four per cent greater than the fatality toll last year, it is indicated by reports of state authorities received here by a nationally known insurance company. The gain in the number of persons killed will make this year's fatalities toll 155 per cent greater than 1920, and 46 per cent greater than in 1928.

The country-wide record of deaths for this year is based upon figures from 39 states, 31 of which have reported fatalities through October, the last month for which complete figures are available.

During the period covered by state reports the rate of increase in deaths was much greater for the first half is indicated for the entire year. From January to May inclusive, motor vehicle deaths increased nearly 11 per cent over the the corresponding period of last year. During the second half of the 10 month period there was a decrease of less than one per cent from the record for the same months last year.

Although the number of deaths from June to October inclusive exceeded by nearly 33 per cent the fatalities for the first five months, the increase has not been as great as for the same period last year. In 1929, deaths from June to October increased 46 per cent over the number of fatalities for the first five months.

If the rate of increase prevailing during the first five months of this year had continued upward during the second five months, as it did last year, the increase in motor vehicle deaths for this year would have been more than 3,000 instead of the 1,000 indicated.

Ohio's fatalities for 1930 are estimated at 1,550 as against 1,469 last year.

Daily Proverb—"Vice can never be too great to be lashed, nor virtue too poor to be commended."

Two youths were given ten-year sentences to the Indiana state reformatory twenty minutes after they had held up and robbed the Deposit bank at Florence in that state. That's the kind of action to take the joy out of bank hold-ups!

Scientists of the Harvard-Bagdad school and the University of Pennsylvania have dug up Mesopotamian business records 3,500 years old in the form of clay cuniform tablets. If some of the totals are in red, it will come pretty near to carrying conviction that Mesopotamia also had its Wall Street.

Thirty-six missionaries, the majority of them Americans, refused to go aboard the United States destroyer, Borie, which had sailed 400 miles to Hakhow in southern China to save them from Communist bandits. Obstinacy like that will serve to lessen sympathy most decidedly should they be taken by bandits and harm befall them.

The supreme court of Belgium has decided against Whitney Warren, the American architect, in his suit to have replaced on the facade of the library in Louvain his inscription, "Destroyed by Teuton Fury; Restored by American Generosity." What possible good would such an inscription of hate accomplish? It is not necessary to inquire regarding the resentment it would maintain.

For a second time Count Felix von Luckner, the famous German sea raider known during the war as the "Sea Wolf," who came through that great struggle without a scratch, has been seriously injured in an automobile accident, and is confined in a hospital in Waukegan, Illinois. It's one thing to defy the enemy on the sea in time of war and quite another to chance motor traffic in time of peace!

That was rather a low-down trick of the British Labor government, asking the soviet Russian government to explain the reflections cast upon the British government at the recent framed-up conspiracy trial put on for home consumption in Russia. How can the bolsheviki explain their alibi for their governmental failure without giving the play away?

Railroad trainmen and switchmen representing six lines running into Spokane, Washington, have voted to share their jobs with the jobless, the trainmen surrendering work up to 1,000 miles a month and the switchmen giving up four days a month to those on the extra lists in the order of their seniority. Such relief, of course, is not complete, but every little helps and even a portion of a loaf is far to be preferred to none at all.

The ownership of $1,000,000 worth of Canadian securities seized by the United States during the World war as the property of alien enemies has been confirmed by the supreme court of Canada, the appeal of the Canadian secretary of state against the judgment in favor of the United States being dismissed. As our own supreme judicial tribunal has demonstrated, federal supreme courts are beyond the influence of politics or other improper consideration and render judgment without fear or favor.

A Reassuring Declaration.

The declaration of President Hoover, made a few days ago in Washington, that every person in the United States who is out of work will be fed and clothed throughout the winter, could hardly have been uttered without conviction on his part that the situation was so well in hand that he was justified in making public announcement to that effect.

The statement, we are told, was made by the President after conference with the heads of the unemployment commissions in practically all the larger cities of the country, the chairman of the board of the American Red Cross and the chairman of the emergency committee for employment of the Rockefeller foundation.

It is reassuring to know, in this connection, that Mr. Hoover spoke without regard to what congress might or might not do to forward the presidential program to relieve unemployment and the consequent distress resulting from it; that even should congress refuse or neglect to cooperate, the promised feeding and clothing of the unemployed of the country would be forthcoming.

Coming from some quarters, such a reassuring message might be taken lightly, but coming from the chief executive of the nation it must be recognized as one of weight entitled to the fullest credence. The President could not, at least would not, have spoken as he did had he not had complete justification for his declaration.

Stimson Balks Red Quiz.

The session of the house committee investigating communistic activities in this country marked by the refusal of Secretary Henry L. Stimson to permit officials of the department of state to testify in open sessions of the committee brought the announcement from its chairman, Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, that no further hearings are anticipated.

"The secretary instructed me," stated A. Dana Hodgdon, chief of the visa office of the department, when called to testify, "to say I am not at liberty to testify in open session. Such testimony, if published, would be contrary to the public interest."

It is not at all difficult to appreciate Secretary Stimson's position. The Fish committee's hearings have not been unlike those of the Nye campaign contributions committee of the senate in that they were not without brass band accompaniment. The committee, or at least its chairman, is not adverse to publicity. If the press was not present to report its proceedings, he saw to it that the press boys got the news. We judge this from the number of statements for publication made by him. Publicity, on the other hand, is just what Secretary Stimson does not seek. The advantage which is the state department's would be in a measure lost if representatives of soviet Russia knew the extent to which the department is familiar with its activities in spreading propaganda and subversive doctrines and the department's method of keeping in touch with them.

Then too, Secretary Stimson may feel, as do many representative newspapers of the country and a large element of the citizenship, that, as the communists are seeking publicity in any form which will keep their activities in the public eye, the Fish committee is playing squarely into their hands, and that the less said before its members the less comfort will be given the reds. Whether one or both of these considerations influenced Secretary Stimson flatly to refuse to permit officials under him to testify in open sessions, there should be agreement that his position is well taken.

The Cleveland typist who won a verdict for $40,000 heart balm, which was subsequently set aside, against a wealthy real estate dealer up there, has been indicted for perjury in swearing during her suit that she didn't know a man to whom she was formerly married. Gold-digging has been made such a business in recent years that it behooves the girls who try it in the future to frame up cases a lot more adroitly than they have in the past.

Otis Skinner says that there are good actors on the stage today, but no great ones. We take it that Mr. Skinner intended this merely as a statement of fact and in no sense of the word as a disclosure.

The soviet Russian government has secured the services of a German expert to produce a number of sound films on the World war. As they are to be produced in several languages, it's easy to figure that they are to be shown for propaganda purposes, but how the bolsheviki can work self-glorification out of that is a mystery.

Christmas Eve Lights.

Just a week from tonight Marion, in common with all the Christian world, will be celebrating Christmas eve, and it goes without the saying that the beautiful custom of many years standing of lighting up homes and raising the blinds to permit the brightness within to flood the city's streets and avenues will be followed as of yore.

The city does not pretend that this charming observance of the night before Christmas originated here. As a matter of fact, it had its origin in Europe centuries ago and was brought across the sea by early settlers on this side of the Atlantic. Originally the custom was to place a lighted candle in a window to welcome the anniversary of the coming of the Christ Child. But the coming into general use of the electric lamp has tended greatly to elaborate the old-time practice with the result that each Chistmas eve the city is a scene of beauty attracting visitors from all the countryside around.

It may be well to say for the benefit of newcomers to the city that no special form of lighting is essential to participation in the observance. While lights, colored lights, lighted wreaths or trees, a lamp—any light which may be shown without fire risk—meets the demand, and the more varied the lighting the more pleasing will be the resultant effect.

A French aeronautic expert seeks a gift of $2,000,000 for rocket experiments looking to a trip to the moon within fifteen years. Almost everybody would be willing to do a little experimenting with rockets for $2,000,000, especially when there isn't any obligation, either moral or legal, to produce the rocket and take off within fifteen years.

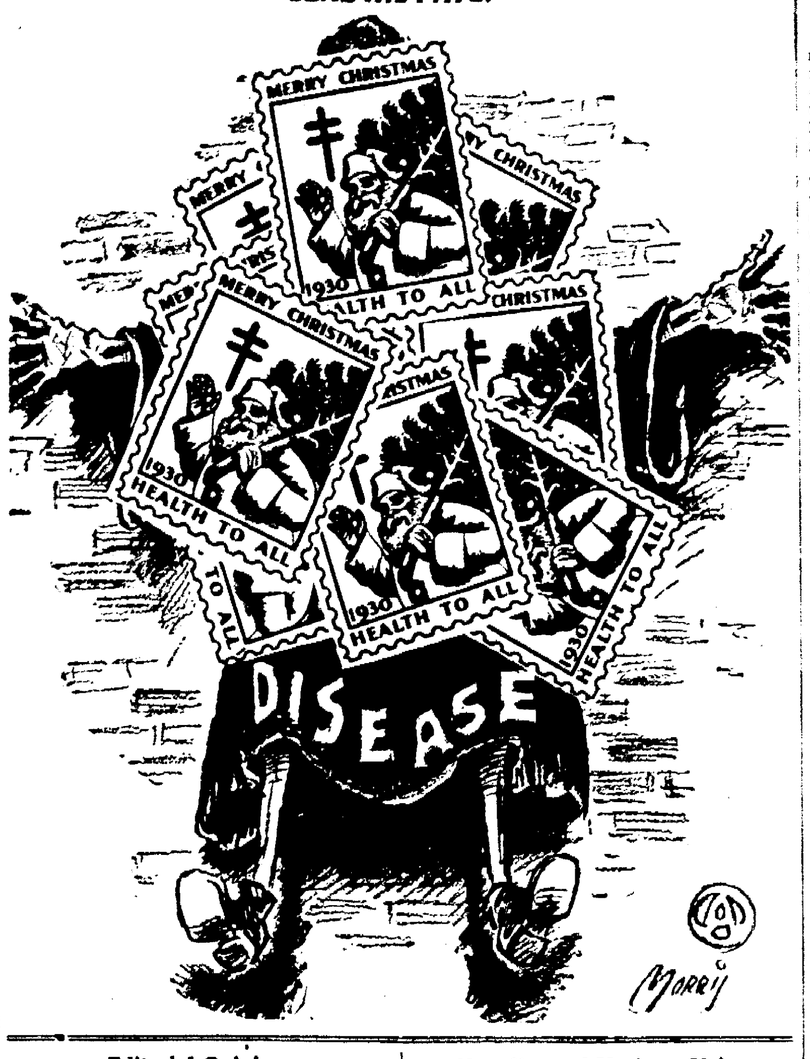
The Keeley institute at Dwight, Illinois, reports 811 drunk cases treated during the first eleven months of the present year, the greatest number since 1907. Surprising! With that many surviving, about the only conclusion possible is that the gentlemenly bootleggers have been diluting their poison more than formerly.

Commenting on the Chicago campaign against the criminal world up there, a paper of that city suggests that the campaign should cover the activities of the lawyers who aid and abet the gangsters and gunmen. Can it be that it holds that the term, "criminal world," doesn't cover the situation?

British archaeologists, returning to Cairo from excavating in ruins 3,000 years old in Lower Egypt, report finding twenty-three nuggets valued at $3,200 at the current price of gold, many bars of silver, a great number of silver statues and gold rings and other ornaments. Think what that metal, had it been coined and loaned out on interest, would have earned during the intervening centuries!

The Russian government is conducting a campaign to improve the restaurants over there, having found that the stuff sold in them is so poor, the prices so high and the portions so small that patrons are forced to bring their food with them or go hungry when "dining out." A lot like the American practice, save that over here it applies only to booze.

SEAL HIS FATE.



Editorial Opinion.

CAPITOL AND WHITE HOUSE.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, says that Mr. Hoover lost his temper, when he issued his recent statement regarding the willingness of certain senators and congressmen to play politics with human misery. That is unlikely. A vigorous statement of the unvarnished truth, applauded as far south as Georgia, at least, scarcely denotes loss of temper. What is more likely is that Mr. Hoover is making good the prediction that for the next two years he will deal less gently with congressional obstruction.

The provocative language used on a recent occasion by Senator McKellar and some of his colleagues was sufficient to induce any president to take up the White House burden of putting the senate in its place. Washington had to do it; and with scarcely an exception, all of his successors as presidents have had to do it or try to. A member of the very first senate left posterity a minute, dyspeptic diary that reveals the beginning of the traditional conflict between the executive and legislative branches in Washington. Some of the "enmity" existing between the White House and the capitol springs from partisan jealousy. A good deal of it is due to the irrepressible bumptiousness of human nature. Senators and congressmen want some of the limelight. A president who succeeds in keeping them from carrying their personal ambitions to the point where they conflict with the public interest is more likely to be esteemed by his countrymen than one who does not. Cleveland was a notable example.

Although Mr. Hoover has seen virtually all of his campaign pledges implemented by legislation, a feeling is abroad in the country that possibly he has handled the senate too leniently. As a coordinate branch of the government congress is entitled to the cooperation of the executive. The chief magistrate is equally entitled to the cooperation of congress. Often he finds it hard to get as much cooperation as he wants; but no president has attained a lofty place in history who did not try for it.—Detroit Free Press.

An Indian Warfare Incident.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

When General Wayne on one of his expeditions against the Indians was resting at Fort Defiance, he sent out a small scouting party to capture prisoners from whom information as to the Indian strength and movements might be obtained. There were six men selected for this dangerous work all speaking the Indian language well—by name, Wells, two Miller brothers, McClellan, Mahaffy and May.

Dressed as Indians and with war paint on, they deceived the Indians themseves by their boldness. Riding into an Indian camp on the Maumee, near the site of Fort Meigs, they eagerly inquired for the location of General Wayne. They were taken by the Indians to be strange Indians from the Northwest, coming from a British stronghold, and were given the information they sought.

A few miles beyond the Indian camp they met an Indian man and woman, whom they took prisoners and started for General Wayne's camp. On the way they came upon another Indian camp. Circuiting it, they tied up their prisoners, and warning them against outcry, returned to the Indian camp and made further inquiry. One old Indian suspected them, and upon manifesting his suspicions, the scouts, by preconcerted signal, each fired upon an Indian, and turning upon their horses, put spurs to them and darted away. They were fired upon and McClellan and Wells were wounded slightly. May's horse slipped and fell under him, and he was captured.

May had formery lived with the Indians, but ran away. They recognized him and told him that next day he would be used by them as a target in a shooting match, and he was. He died with fifty bullet wounds in his body. The rest of the party reached General Wayne's camp in safety with their prisoners.

Heredity and Varicose Veins.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Varicose veins have undoubtedly troubled mankind ever since the days of Noah. Of course, it is an ailment that has become more common since his time. No doubt we may attribute this increased prevalence to our modern manner of living.

Whenever the word, "varicose," is used, it refers to an unnatural swelling. That is exactly what we are dealing with in varicose veins. The veins are unduly large, appear swollen, and there is stagnation of blood in the affected vessels. The poor circulation is due to the loss of elasticity in the walls of the veins.

The condition is most commonly seen in adult women, particularly after child-birth. It is sometimes met in male adults, particularly in men whose work requires long and uninterrupted standing.

The veins of the lower extremities and rectum are particularly liable to attack. In the latter region it is spoken of as "hemorrhoids," or "piles." It may do so, but it very rarely involves other parts of the body.

No one cause can be held responsible for this condition. Some persons, even under the same conditions of living, are much more liable than others to the formation of varicose veins. On this account, the ailment has been considered hereditary. Undoubtedly this factor plays a role in the condition.

As I have suggested, persons whose occupations demand long continued standing are more prone to the condition. This is especially so if they happen to be overweight, or even moderately stout. There is a loss in the tone of the vessel wall. Consequently its tissues relax because of the natural weakness and, with additional weight to support, they soon stretch.

People with varicose veins should never wear tight garters, or other constricting clothes. If constipation is present it should be corrected. Avoid standing as much as possible. When resting after a day's work, the feet should be elevated on a couch or chair.

The use of the rubber stocking is of doubtful value. It soon loses its elasticity and when worn after that happens, it does more harm than good.

For mechanical support your physician will bandage your legs with a "figure-of-eight" bandage. After you have watched him apply it a few times, you will have no difficulty in applying the bandage yourself. For this purpose it is considered good practice to use an elastic gauze bandage. Such bandages are not only elastic, but they can be washed and kept clean.

Recently the so-called injection treatment for varicose veins has been used with great success, I am told. By those who apply it this method is considered preferable to the operation which is sometimes indicated. The injecton of certain medications into the varicose vein causes its disappearance. The procedure is simple, painless and, rightly applied, is without danger.

Needless to say, this ailment is one that requires the personal and skilful attention of the physician. Under his direction you may hope for relief.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

W. C. Q—What proportion of peroxide and ammonia should be used to bleach the skin?

A—This would be very drastic treatment for the delicate texture of the skin. Try using equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide, and if the preparation is drying, it might be wise to use a good cold cream after each application.—Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Syndicate, Inc.

Star and Nebulae.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Many studies and investigations have been made, especially in very recent years, to learn more about the stars. A capital problem is concerned with the brightness of the stars, to distinguish between apparent and absolute luminosity, and to judge the size and distance from us of stars by means of luminosity.

Absolute luminosity may be associated with the mass of a star, on the general assumption, which seems quite reasonable, that stars of the same spectro type, surface for surface, have the same degree of brightness.

A further problem contents itself with the number of stars in our galactic system. Take a very small portion of the Milky way, make a greatly magnified photograph of it, and then endeavor to count the number of stars on the photographic plate. This will give you perhaps as good an idea as can be derived in any way, as to the appalling number of stars that are to be found in our galactic system.

Various estimates have been made, and in a number of different ways. Unfortunately, the results vary so widely as to cause us to question the accuracy or suitability of the methods employed. For example, Shapley estimates the number of stars to be about 100,000,000,000. Whereas Eddington, working from a different point of view, arrives at a figure three times that reached by Shapley.

It is not easy to arrive at any intelligent comprehension of what we mean by hundreds of billions. To put this concretely is a puzzling task. In his "The Great Astronomer," Williams makes the following attempts to enable us to visualize such a huge number.

Suppose, he says, that each star of the 100,000,000,000 in the galaxy were reduced in size to the mere needle-point it seems—say to the size of a period on this printed page.

If, then, the 100,000,000,000 periods could be distributed single file, one after another in close contact, the line of periods would suffice to reach round the globe at the equator. If you try to imagine how many of these periods would be required to make a line a mile long, and then imagine 25,000 such lines, you at least realize that we are dealing with a great many periods.

Again, suppose each one of our 100,000,000,000 stars to be the size of a silver quarter-dollar, and that the quarters were spread out in a close contact to form a mosaic covering the surface of the ground. There would be enough of the quarters to cover 250 square miles, or a surface of sixteen miles square. That would be a great many quarters.

If we suppose each of the quarters magnified to a diameter of nine feet, we should then be able to make a solid mosaic covering the entire surface of the United States.

Finally, if each of our stars had a diameter of thirty-eight feet—the length of a big room—the aggregated supply of such paving stones would put a solid layer over every mile of the land surface of the globe.

Another series of enormous figures, which the modern astronomer has to deal with, is concerned with those gigantic and excessively remote aggregations of matter known as the spiral nebulae. More than a century ago, the astronomer, Herschel, made a study of these bodies in connection with our galactic system.

Without having at his command the mighty resources of present-day astronomers, Herschel arrived at fundamentally sound conclusions. These have been verified in recent years by a number of the most expert astronomical observers now living.

Herschel gave a correct view of the form of the galactic system; and also was correct in his surmise, based on a comparatively small amount of data, that the nebulae are island universes lying outside and far beyond our system.

Professor A. E. Fath, of Carleton college, estimates that the number of nebulae within reach of the largest photographic telescopes may be taken provisionaly at from one-quarter to one-half million.

Estimates of the distances away from us of some of these nebulae vary from 700,000 light-years to possible 145,000,000 light-years. Light travels at the rate of about 1,000,000,000 feet per second. This would have to be multiplied by the number of seconds in a year to determine the distance which light travels in a year.

How far, then, is 100,000,000 light-years for example? Williams suggests that a cable of fine silk thread, of this length, be wound around the earth at the equator as it rotates. There would be enough of the thread first to make a belt 4,000 miles wide around the entire globe; and further, not one such belt, but 1,000 belts! — Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

Two Killed, Others Captured After Series of Holdups.

By The Associated Press

SEYMOUR, Ind., Dec. 17—The transcript of the battle which five daring bank bandits lost yesterday to a posse of unrelenting officers resulted in the capture of bigger criminals, some than was at first announced, authorities said as they reviewed the results.

The gang two of whose members were killed, was wanted for a series of bank holdups in western Indiana, in addition to the robbery of the Citizens State bank at Clinton, which led to their downfall.

The dead bandits were identified as Thomas Bell, 42, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and ... W. Landley, 65, of Frankfort, Ind.

Landley is believed to have killed himself. Two members of the poose were wounded in the running fight which ended in a corn field near here after a chase of nearly 70 miles. Bell was killed by Ernest Foster, a volunteer posseman. E. Bunker, Bell's companion, was captured. Two others, William ... of Kansas City and William ... Practically all the estimated loot —$15,000—was recovered.

The two officers wounded were ... Walker, a deputy sheriff who ... to halt the bandit car as it ... through Dana, Ind., and who ... probably fatally wounded, and Walter Burnsides, a Clinton policeman, although hit by a bullet from one of the robbers' three machine guns, refused to abandon the chase until it ended.

A GREAT MAN, of whom the world knows too little, died 100 years ago today. Our southern neighbor, Bolivia, is named for Simon Bolivar, who was born in Venezuela in 1783 and died in 1830 after giving freedom from Spain to Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Panama, Peru and Bolivia.

Born a rich man, his father an owner of much land and many slaves, Bolivar interested himself in human liberty and fought for it to his death.

He was a far-seeing statesman, and lawmakers today might learn from him. He foresaw the trend and the difficulties of democracy, and his last proclamation as supreme head of Bolivia was issued to the people on his deathbed.

He went successfully through 200 bloody battles. That will interest those who care little about statesmanship.

FORD IN MISHAP

The motor magnate, his secretary and a third man were driving through Youngstown, en route to Detroit from Washington when the accident, which was of a minor nature, occurred, it was said.

A fender of Ford's car was bent and Ford and his secretary drove to the Trinity Motor company where E. H. Shadburn, manager, obtained another car for them.

There was much secrecy concerning the mishap which occurred in Federal street, Youngstown's main thoroughfare. It was said the Ford machine was in a collision with another car.

Ford declined to discuss the accident and when asked for an interview said he had "absolutely nothing to say."

"I haven't anything to say about anything," he said. "It's cold and I'm always being misquoted."

without a proper warrant, could not search a private dwelling for liquor unless agents have evidence of trafficking.

Gets $300 Fine

Judge Martin held that the liquor is subject to seizure and the residence is subject to raid if the liquor is illegally obtained or manufactured.

In ruling as he did, Judge Martin referred to a case tried by the Ohio supreme court in which the following two sections of law were cited: "No search warrant shall be issued to search any private dwelling occupied as such unless it is being used for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors or unless it is in part used for some business purpose. . . . . " Apparently contradicting and superseding this section was another ruling which says in part: "And no place shall be regarded as a bona fide private residence under the laws prohibiting the liquor traffic wherein liquors are possessed which have been illegally manufactured or obtained."

Since Nicolosi was obliged to admit ownership of the liquor submitted as evidence before he could ask for a return of the property, he was found guilty of the possession charge by Judge Martin. He was fined $300, the sentence being stayed pending proceedings in error under bond.

studying the opinion today with a view of taking an appeal.

"Meanwhile," he said, "as I understand it, no other judge in the United States, nor the judges of this district are bound by the opinion and therefore, enforcement of the Volstead act in New Jersey will continue until the remaining three judges of this bench all decide in agreement with Judge Clark, or, until a decision of the higher courts is reached in his opinion."

Judge Clark's decision was the outcome of what amounted to a test case of the contention of a committee of the New York County Lawyers' association that the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment was invalid under the Tenth amendment to the constitution, which modified article five.

Judge Clark at 38 is the youngest member of the federal bench. He was appointed in May, 1925, by President Coolidge, resigning from the bench of the New Jersey court of appeals to accept the federal post. His appointment was backed by the late Wayne B. REVERSAL PREDICTED

Decision Not To Have Much Weight, Is Opinion in Washington.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17—Neither cheers nor groans echoed in Washington at news that a federal judge had ruled the Eighteenth amendment invalid. Such opinion as was expressed here today held the decision would not cut much ice.

Drys predicted the supreme court, if and when the ruling comes up for review, will reverse it. They cited numerous precedents. The justice department held it could not, until after supreme court action, affect the status of prohibition. Anti-prohibitionists in Washington had not summed up their attitude, but most heads of national wet groups in other cities were conservative in comment.

The drys gave their position in expressing belief that the grounds upon which Judge William Clark of New Jersey, yesterday decided against the prohibition amendment, had been held unsound by the supreme court years ago.

DROUTH BILL CUT IS VOTED

House Committee Favors Reduction to $30,000,000; Fight Forecast.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17—The house agriculture committee today voted to reduce from $60,000,000 to $30,000,000 the senate drouth relief loan bill.

The vote to report the bill was 16 to 1 after the Democrats joined by Representative Garber, Republican of Virginia, had been defeated on an effort to retain the senate figure.

The committee also struck out language authorizing loans to farms for human food.

Democrats on the committee will carry the fight for $60,000,000 and food loans to the floor. The committee's action followed a stormy hearing at which Secretary Hyde denied ever approving the $60,000,000 senate food loan bill.

An unsuccessful effort was made by Democratic leader Garner to get consideration of the house bill on the floor when that body convened. Representative Sproul, Republican of Illinois, objected.

Before the senate today also was the report of its conference committee on the $116,000,000 public works bill recommending abandonment of amendments to restrict the President's discretion in spending the money, control the wages to be paid on its projects and make special provisions for some states.

PASS WORLD COURT TILL NEXT SESSION

Committee Action Takes Issue Out of Present Program of Congress.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 — The senate foreign relations committee today voted to defer consideration of the World court until next December. The vote was ten to nine.

Senator Reed, Republican of Pennsylvania, made the motion to postpone consideratin. Republicans including friend and foe of the court, joined him almost solidly. Democrats voted unitedly against the postponement.

Chairman Borah of the committee, an opponent of the court, and Senator Gillett, of Massachusetts, an advocate, were the only Republicans to vote against deferment.

By this move the Republicans forestalled any chance of the court issue becoming involved in this short session. They feared its discussion might lead to an extra session. It was agreed that there was no opportunity to vote on the court at this session which ends March 4.

The committee decided to hear Elihu Root, former secretary of State, who helped to draft the revised statutes of the World court which were modified in an effort to bring about an agreement among the other powers and the United States on the senate's reservation.

LAST NIGHT at the THEATERS

Reginald Denny in Light Role

REGINALD DENNY does one of his light comedy roles in "What a Man" closing at the Ohio tonight. Nothing heavy about the picture, but catchy dialogue and comedy situations make it an evening's entertainment.

Lucille Ward is an eccentric, wealthy old woman whose hobby is providing tramps with clean clothes, food and shelter and trying to start them on a career of respectability. Denny and a gang have started on a shady venture, but when he hears of this wealthy old woman he leaves his pals and is hired as her chauffeur. The aristocratic family is shocked, but the old women refuses to fire him and the plot develops.

Miriam Seegar is her oldest daughter and is antagonistic to Denny because he has such perfect manners and is so adept at playing the gentleman. The butler discovers that Denny was a captain in the famous Gold Stream Guards during the war and reveals his identity. Denny insists that he be allowed to make good on his own, and the family and Eileen are won to him, Eileen to the extent that things are looking towards a big wedding when the show closes.

Comedy and newsreel complete the program.
